MEET KUDU HOME FOUNDER

THANDI RENALDI

FOUNDER STORY

When British-South African Thandi Renaldi was renovating her home a few years ago, she started hunting for home goods on her travels to Africa. "Then friends started asking me to bring back items for them from my trips and things snowballed from there."

HER INSPIRATION

"The ethical and sustainable tradition of these pieces harnesses an age-old craft transforming cow horn into unique, polished interior pieces." The traditional production method means, "no two pieces are the same — they vary in pattern and shade due to the natural, organic nature of horn."

STAYING PRODUCTIVE OVER HOLIDAYS

"Running an online business means that the holidays are a really busy time of year for KUDU. That said, the holidays are also a time for rest, reflection and being with loved ones so I try to find the balance between staying on top of things — like mountains of emails — and being able to recharge my batteries."

WHO THIS GIFT IS FOR

"I will be giving a cow horn trinket tray to my sister. She will have a place to put her earrings and watch by her bedside at the end of the day."
